with the bank for safe keeping. This, however, he denies.

His night's incarceration at Police Headquarters did not seem to affect Hain very much. He had no visitors there, nor were there any on hand this morning. As a fact he had made all arrangements before giving himself up.

There is a big difference in his bearing and that of other prisoners charged with offenses of a similar nature. He is heartily sick of himself, and is anxious for the punishment which he knows is going to be meted out to him.

Friends in plenty offered to go on his bond yesterday, but he steadily refused all offers.

He seems to be afraid of meeting the eye of any one, and looks like a man

He was dressed in a light suit of tweed, straw hat, turned-down collar and carried a small vallee.

Lawyer Charles C. Nadal, acting for the Fidelity and Casualty InsuranceCompany, which lost $15,000 by giving bonds to the bank for Bain; was on hand to see that the latter was prosecuted. Excommissioner Stephenson and Justice Koch, who are old friends, first held a whispered conversation near the rail, and then the Home Bank's President was taken in hand by Clerk Ormsby, who made out the commisint.

The affidavit recited the facts already published in "The Evening World"—that bonds of the present actual value of $15,185 had been stolen from the bank. Then prisoner and accuser were brought tice Koch.

"I am the gentleman," replied Bain, who toyed nervously with his mustache. "Do you demand an examination?"

"No. I plead gullty, and want to go to prison at once." made everything easy, and the signatures were attached. Bain e had no bondsmen, nor did he

"What?" cried ex-Commissioner Stephenson, thinking he was the party adressed, and at the same time diving his hands into his peckets. "Do you want it all now."

Justice Koch explained amid general laughter, in which the prisoner joined, that he intended the remark for Bain, who was held in $10,000 ball. The ex-that he intended the remark for Bain, who was held in $10,000 bail. The excashier was then led away.

Before going he was asked by an "Evening World" reporter if he had anything to say in mitigation of his offense. "No. I have nothing whatever to say." he said. "I am guilty, that is all. and I want to go to prison, if convicted."

Lawyer Nadal said the Fidelity and Casualty Company was still trying to trace the stolen bonds, and expected to get some of the money back. They were badly handicapped, he said, by the fact that the brokers with whom Bain had his dealings in Wall street had gone under. Like Mr. Stephenson, the Fidelity Company's officials think that Bain did not intend to steal.

It was expected that some of Bain's relatives would have been in court this morning, but none appeared. This is explained by the fact that the ex-cashier expressly asked all of them to stay away.

Before surrendering himself he made

Roe was engaged by Mr. Windmulle seven weeks ago at a salary of $110 a month. He had formerly been employee by the Importers' and Traders' by the Importers' and Traders' Bank. He was highly recommended. Mr. Windmuller says, by the bank officials. He had been working for a hardware firm at Paterson just before the Reform Club employed him, but the Club did not think it necessary to get the Paterson firm's recommendation.

So much confidence was placed in Mr. Roe that he was given an indorsed check for $1,500 in the latter part of August to get money to pay the Club servants' salaries.

Before he became cashier of the Lotos Club Maiway had been connected with Ollie Teall's Vaudeville Club and the Union League Club. At the latter he was accountant, but lost his position, it is said, as a result of a controversy with the Board of Governors.

He is a native of Canada, and was about thirty years old. Very few members of the Lotos Club, it is said, knew of the defalcation, the Board of Governors having kept the matter secret.

Although efforts were made to find Malway they were unsuccessful, and according to a well-informed member of the Club, the matter has now been dropped, the deficiency having been made up.

It is reported that Malway wrote a in January last, and planned or author-letter to one of the officers of the Club after he went away threatening to blow his brains out if any attempt was made to pursue him.

$2,000,000; the Park avenue improvement, from the substance overs! Mayor Gilroy is greatly pleased over the progress made towards the completion of these great works. He did not plan them all, but he made them a reality. The new City Hail and Elm street widening had been contemplated for years, for so many years, in fact, that people hid begun to consider them visions of the past. When Mayor Gilroy toke hold of the matter in his practical, business-like way they became an actuality.

All that remains to be done in regard to Elm street is to apply to the Supreme Court for the appointment of appraisers of the property to be consequenced.

took hold of the matter in his practical, business-like way they became an actuality.

All that remains to be done in regard to Elim street is to apply to the Supreme Court for the appointment of appraisers of the property to be condemned, and the Corporation Counzel has been instructed to make, the application by the Hoard of Street Openings. Six months after the appraisers are appointed the title to the property needed will be vested in the city.

The work to prevent the pollution of the city's drinking water was the first to be undertaken, and is still going on. The contract for the Harlem bridge has been awarded to John J. Hopper, and work on the structure will commende as soon as the engineer decides wither granite or gneiss is to be used for the piers.

The entire cost of all these works, accepting lowest figures of the estimates for the City Hall and Elm street widening, will be $17,250,000, but as the actual cost invariably exceeds the official estimates, it may be wafe to calculate on $20,000,000, and probably more.

None of this money is to be raised by taxation at present. The money will be raised by the issue of bonds, which a future generation will have to redeem.
